A healthy future for all

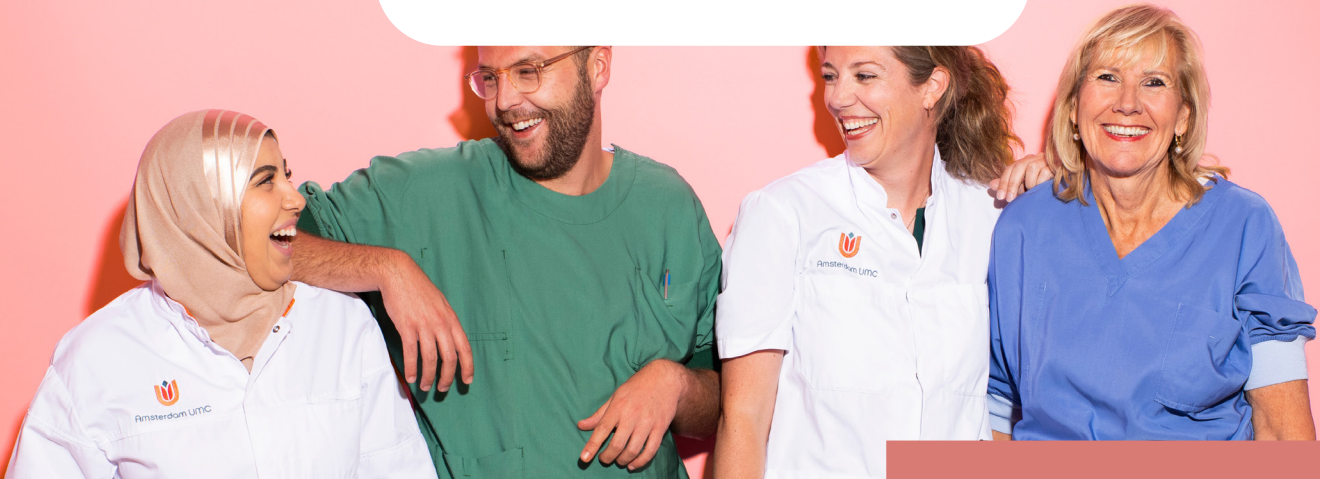

The story of Amsterdam UMC

At Amsterdam UMC, we work every day toward a healthy future for all. As an (inter)national knowledge institute in research and healthcare, we focus on a future where diseases are increasingly prevented, care remains accessible, and patients receive the right treatment.

Research, education, patient care, and societal impact

Our expertise is the foundation for this – expertise that we acquire through scientific research, pass on through education, apply in patient care, and translate into innovative solutions with real social impact. Building on an academic tradition dating back to the original Amsterdam Gasthuizen, we work for the health of current and future generations, both at home and abroad.

Caring, proactive, and inquisitive

Our colleagues are caring, proactive, and inquisitive. We cherish these qualities, especially as the pressure on the healthcare system grows. The demand for care is rising, a structural labor shortage persists, and health disparities between population groups are increasing. Furthermore, international conflicts, potential pandemics, and the effects of climate change can rapidly intensify these pressures.

Through innovation and digitalization, we make our care more efficient, accessible,
and sustainable

Innovative solutions

At Amsterdam UMC, our more than 17,000 colleagues lead the way with innovative solutions, allowing us to achieve more each day. Through innovation and digitalization, we make our care more efficient, accessible, and sustainable. By actively collaborating with other healthcare and knowledge institutions, we improve care and share new insights as early as possible.

Making a true difference in society

Our collaboration happens regionally and nationally - with neighboring hospitals, universities, governments, and patient associations - as well as internationally, where we frequently lead research consortia. We believe it is essential that our work contributes to major societal challenges; this is central to our role as a university medical center and allows us to make a true difference in society.

By everyone, for everyone

Our commitment is by everyone, for everyone, regardless of background, belief, social status, or stage of life. Everyone belongs; it is precisely this diversity that makes us and our patients stronger. We are proud to stand at the heart of society. From that position, we work today with a single goal for the healthcare of tomorrow: a healthy future for all.
